

A strategic view on telehealth.

For years, telehealth comprised little more than virtual office visits, but the pandemic brought with it new needs and new approaches. Much more than an ancillary offering, virtual care is now an important part of a comprehensive staffing strategy.

THE EVOLUTION OF VIRTUAL CARE

The exploding demand for virtual care has created a number of new use cases, such as: remote patient monitoring, virtual hospitals, specialty expansions, asynchronous chat, rounding, peer-to-peer consultation, and more. Still, most hospitals are lagging behind in addressing these new opportunities.
